Ted Shawn Dancers At New Rochelle

Ted Shawn—America's Greatest Male Dancer.

America has produced but a single great male dancer—Ted Shawn. During the past 10 years he has been climbing steadily until now in point of achievement he ranks with the famous Russians—Mordkin and Nijinsky.

He is not only a dancer, but a producer, a lecturer, a costumer and an author. His latest book—"Gods Who Dance" is announced for April publication by E. P. Dutton & Company. In large part it will be devoted to his experiences and his descriptions of the native dances witnessed during the 18 months' tour of the Orient, made with the Denishawn Dancers three years ago.

Otherwise Mr. Shawn's creative ability has resulted in what has come to be known as the Denishawn technique. The Denishawn Schools, of which there are eight between New York and Los Angeles, owe a great part of their teaching material to the facile dance-writing of Ted Shawn.

His latest and most noteworthy creations will be shown when he appears with his company of 20 Denishawn Dancers at the New Rochelle Theatre, New Rochelle, Sunday night.

Bob Custer In Another Thriller

Bob Custer, dashing young western star whose popularity has been growing by leaps and bounds, will be at the Lowe's Strand theatre again on Friday and Saturday in "West of Santa Fe", his latest starring picture. In the supporting cast will be found Peggy Montgomery, Bud Osborne and J. P. McGowan.

The picture was made on the locations pictured by Bryan Coleman in writing his story—a ranch just west of Santa Fe, New Mexico. Hundreds of head of horses are used in round-up and branding scenes.

The story is filled with action from beginning to end and was produced by J. Charles Davis of the El Dorado Productions, Inc.

Put this on your calendar as one picture you must not miss, provided you like action pictures.

ROY H. SLOANE IS BACK HERE FOR NEW TRIAL

Daring Convict, Former College Student, Is Returned From Sing Sing Prison —Larceny Charged

Roy H. Sloane, 23-year-old former Columbia University student and present Sing Sing convict, who amazed prison keepers and attorneys with his plan to escape from Sing Sing and his conduct of his own defense against the charge, is back in the County Jail here for a new trial.

Sloane was convicted of feloniously attempting to escape from prison. He had been sent there for stealing automobiles in Westchester. He now is to have a new trial on the automobile charge under one of the last orders signed by former County Judge Walter G. C. Otto before he left the bench.

If Sloane is acquitted of stealing the automobiles he will attempt to show, it is expected, that he was wrongly in prison when he was accused and convicted of trying to escape and therefore should be released from serving not only the term for larceny but also the additional sentence for the attempted escape.

Assistant District Attorney James Dempsey, Jr., will prosecute Sloane at his new trial here sometime late this month in County Court before Judge Frederick P. Close.

A year and a half ago Sloane was tried in County Court here before Judge William F. Bleakley. He demonstrated to an astounded crowded courtroom how an implement made with tools and odds and ends of metal smuggled into his cell would open the cell door. His speeches to the jury from the witness chair and his cross examination of witnesses, including District Attorney Frank H. Coyne, lasted then an assistant, amused and amazed attorneys here.

After some deliberation the jury found Sloane technically guilty of trying to break out of Sing Sing and he was returned there to serve seven years in addition to his original five-year sentence for automobile thefts.

Sloane exhibited more than the average intelligence in court and won wide sympathy for what he made to appear an unfortunate series of "bad breaks" against him.

His mother is a magazine writer who now lives in India and he has a sister who married into a prominent family.

ENGINEERS OF COUNTY WILL HOLD MEETING

Dr. T. Kennan Thompson to Tell How to Connect Manhattan With Rest of the Country

Yonkers, April 4.—The annual meeting of the Westchester County Chapter of the New York State Society of Professional Engineers and Land Surveyors, of which Deputy Chief Engineer L. G. Holleran of the Park Commission is president, will be held this evening in Yonkers City Hall, at 8 o'clock.

The result of election of four members of the board of directors, to serve terms of three years, each, will be announced, and an illustrated talk will be delivered by Dr. T. Kennard Thompson, consulting engineer, of Yonkers.

Dr. Thompson's subject will be "A belt line railroad and elevated highways for Manhattan, and how to connect with the rest of the United States." The talk will include what the speaker considers the best design for Hudson River tunnels.

The state organization, of which the Westchester chapter is a unit, is meeting today in New York City in annual convention with a dinner to follow this evening.

Strong Boy

The nineteen-year-old Hungarian shepherd boy, Toldi, who was discovered by the manager of the late Sigmund Breitbart, giving an exhibition of his physical prowess by lifting his extremely heavy cow during one of his acts in a Berlin theatre.

Novarro Picture Has Many Thrills

Ramon Novarro is famous as one of the film's greatest romantic heroes, and is associated much with the costume type of drama.

But Novarro achieves his greatest romance of the screen in the very modern and not over-clean working logs of an aviator—one of the flyers of Uncle Sam's navy, in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's new naval aviation romance "The Flying Fleet," now playing at Loew's State theatre with sound synchronization.

It is a story of thrills and romance combined in an intricate but engrossing pattern; there are parachute jumps from flying planes, sensational maneuvers in the skies, the wreck of a great plane at sea and a rescue by the airplane carrier, mother ship of the eagles of the fleet.

Through it all runs an intensely human story of six young naval cadets, pals through all, and the inexorable rule of the survival of the fittest. The love interest is between Novarro as the young flying lieutenant and Anita Page, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's blonde discovery, who makes a most charming "Anita" to Novarro's "Tomby."

The "Naval aviators" in the picture are splendidly cast, including Ralph Graves, Carroll Nye, Sumner Getchell, Edith Nugent and Gardner James. The dignified admiral of the picture is Alfred Allen.

George Hill, who directed "Tell It to the Marines" and "The Cossacks," wove the story together skilfully from a scenario by Richard Schayer. The air scenes, filmed at the North Island naval base through the co-operation of Admiral Joseph M. Reeves, include the terrifying stunts of the navy's famous "Suicide Squad" of aerial acrobats, maneuvers with hundreds of naval planes in the air, and other exciting high spots.

Intimate scenes show life in the service, aboard the airplane carrier ship "Saratoga" and in the flying base of the navy, and the complete training of an aviator is seen in the scenes showing Novarro's education for the air.

Lieutenant Commander Frank Wead, acted as technical adviser and story expert during the making of the picture, and among the actors are actual famous navy aviators such as Lieuts. "Put" Byrns, C. F. Greber, D. W. Tomlinson, William Davis and others.

Unusual Plot In "Night Hawk"

"Night Hawk," a drama in three acts by Roland Oliver, this evening and continuing with a matinee and night performance Saturday at the New Rochelle Theatre has Enid Markey in the leading role. It tells the story of Maisie Buck, a lady with a very full head, who besieges a doctor to use her in an experiment of rejuvenation. She promises that if he successfully rejuvenates her youth, she will "go straight," with the hopes of interesting some one who will accompany her to the altar. The experiment accomplishes its results, but fate intervening makes the doctor's young brother the subject of the woman's attentions. The doctor in anger reveals the facts in the case, which forces the brother to walk out of the picture and the girl to seek refuge in her old home.

Given 60 Days On Woman's Complaint

Doage was arrested Tuesday afternoon upon a complaint sworn before Judge Seely by Mrs. Mary Naughton of East Irvington who alleged Doage was disorderly in her presence and was trespassing on the grounds of her home.
