Drowns In Quarry

Abraham Blumberg, Brooklyn, Loses Life in Peekskill Quarry Pool; Friends Make Futile Effort to Save Him; Recover Body

Peekskill—Abraham Bloomberg, 23, of Brooklyn, was drowned last night while swimming in Millstone quarry near here.

The body was recovered at 7:10 o'clock with grappling irons and Dr. R. R. Lasewy pronounced the man dead after attempts to revive him failed.

Bloomberg had been at a summer camp near here. With a party of friends, boys and girls, he went swimming last night. Bloomberg stepped off a ledge of rock and swallowed a quantity of water. Before he could regain his breath he went down. One of the girls clutched the jersey of his suit but lost her hold. Another man dove unsuccessfully in an attempt to rescue Bloomberg.

National Convention Happenings Recounted to Local Group. Plans for Fall Sessions Are Begun. To Move to New Hotel.

"Only bears sleep part of the year," is the unanimous opinion of the White Plains Kiwanis Club, and their regular weekly meeting held yesterday noon at the Elks' Club was marked by an unusually heavy volume of business, despite a mercury that hovered in the eighties.

Foremost was the report of President Charles H. Cheney, club delegate to the national convention held the latter part of June in Milwaukee.

President Cheney recounted in detail his entire trip, beginning from the time he left White Plains until the time he stepped on the train that carried him back home, about a week later. On motion, it was voted to incorporate his account of the trip into the minutes of the club.

A letter was read by Secretary Howard Olsen in which Mr. Cheney was lauded by past president O. Samuel Cummings for the splendid work he had done as head of the vocational guidance committee of the Kiwanis International and appreciation of his efforts in this direction was given in the communication. Mr. Cheney was chairman of the committee and introduced the discussion at the national convention.

Another communication was read in which the Kiwanis Club was invited to attend Westchester County the local unit of the National Guard to be held at Fort Smith, Peekskill, July 17. Chairman Lawrence Yeager urged all those possible to attend.

Washington Letter

By RAYMOND CLAPPER
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington—President Hoover is using the same methods of attacking problems facing the nation as he employed when he was Secretary of Commerce.

The chief executive is a firm advocate of investigating and fact-finding commissions and has always followed the policy of having on the different commissions members of the industry concerned in the inquiry.

Since his inauguration Mr. Hoover has named a law enforcement commission, the Nicaraguan Canal commission, child welfare conference and recommended to Congress a commission to inquire into the benefits to be had from transfer of the prohibition department from the Treasury to Justice Department.

His likewise is said to be considering the advisability of a commission to deal with the reorganization of all government departments and bureaus and has given additional duties to the International Joint Commission which handles boundary, water rights and other questions.

While Secretary of Commerce, Mr. Hoover named the Lumber Grade Commission, the National Screw Thread Commission, the commission to study waste in industry and sponsored the commission that investigated working conditions in the steel industry and recommended the abolishment of the 12-hour day.

His choice of members for the Federal farm board are being watched with interest. First selections reveal Mr. Hoover carefully has eliminated from the hundreds seeking appointment to the board, all politicians and instead has chosen only men who by virtue of their present positions in the agricultural world are capable of giving the newly organized board valuable personal and first-hand advice and suggestions.

This is indicative of Hoover the organizer and the practical engineer. In the commissions he served on or was head of as Secretary of Commerce, the President obtained from members connected with the industry in question, all problems bordering on it and their suggestions. This he believes, facilitated early and satisfactory agreements.

The capital is intensely interested in President Hoover's recent announcement that a sum of $800,000 has been placed available to him for child welfare work.

Considerable curiosity had been displayed as to the donor of the huge fund. Philanthropists "on the hill" professed ignorance of the donor's identity.

So far as could be learned, this is the first time a fund has been made available to the President from asource outside the government for distribution. Mr. Hoover has called for a conference of welfare leaders in Washington at which time all problems affecting the health and character of the nation's youth are to be considered.

Secretary of Treasury Mellon has issued an emphatic denial of current reports that the Treasury department was considering the plan of erecting a seven-foot fence on the Canadian border line to aid in the fight staged there to end liquor smuggling. The suggestion provoked considerable merriment in the capital. Assistant Secretary of Treasury Lowman in charge of prohibition enforcement said some "members of congress" had made the suggestion but denied the treasury department had considered it seriously.
