FINANCIAL NEWS—STOCK MARKET REVIEW

By MAURICE HALLGREN
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Berlin, (UP)—Michael Bohnen, German singer of Metropolitan Opera fame, is growing tired of Wagner, is becoming increasingly bored with having, figuratively speaking, to "drape sauerkraut about his chin every evening," as he himself put it the other day in alluring his views about what seemed to him to be wrong in the musical world. Furthermore, he believes that the public itself is tiring of the heavy Wagnerian themes and is hungering for something lighter.

Recounting his experiences of the last six years with the Metropolitan Opera, he asserted that the German master's popularity had noticeably waned in the course of that period, and, he added, "in another six years the Wagner following will be even smaller than it is today." He offered the thought partly in apology for his having forsaken grand opera to take the lead in a musical operetta—Oscar Straus' "Marietta"—during his brief visit to Berlin this summer.

Principally responsible for this change in public taste, Bohnen suggested, is the desire of the people of today to live in the mode or spirit of today "and not in the mood of 'Tannhaeuser' and 'Tannhauser' and the Nibelungen." He confessed that Wagner's music is still "good," but added that one "can enjoy it just as well in a concert hall."

At this point in the interview Bohnen rather unexpectedly admitted that the talkies stood behind his line of reasoning; "everyone will soon be running to the cinema to take their music in this new form." Bohnen seemed fairly convinced that the shorter operas, operettas and other musical shows can be successfully and pleasingly tone-filmed.

"In this connection," he continued, "I believe that Berlin will become a new Hollywood. It lies in the center of the principal language areas. Today Maurice Chevalier could be brought from Paris in a few hours to make a tone-film in French; tomorrow I could sing the same role in German; the following day someone could fly here from London to produce an English-language version, and the day thereafter a Spanish artist could be brought from Madrid to put the film into Spanish. Thus the tonefilm could without loss of time be produced in the principal tongues of the world."

Returning to Wagner, Bohnen said he had sung Hans Sachs in "Die Meistersinger," exactly 140 times, and for the present "would like just a little rest from Hans Sachs and everything else Wagnerian."

When the Graf Zeppelin arrived at Friedrichshafen on Saturday, August 10, after its record-breaking transatlantic voyage from Lakehurst there were present in the hangar when the passengers disembarked six quiet-looking men who appeared to be taking an unusually deep interest in the disembarking process. The men had come from Berlin just an hour or two before and had gone directly to the hangar. As the Zeppelin was towed into its berth they stood around unconcernedly but when the passengers began trooping single file out of the cabin the men were all attention.

Only two or three of the thirty odd newspaper reporters present noticed the six men, but their presence seemed to suggest a story and upon investigation they learned that the men were agents of the German secret police. They could, however, the reporters' investigations ran up a blind alley; every conceivable kind of questioning was resorted to as well as all sorts and varieties of sleuthing and snooping, but all that the newspapermen could learn was that the silent six were secret police and that the reason for their presence in the Zeppelin hangar was nobody's business.

Later it was authoritatively revealed that a notoriously narcotic smuggler had been reported on his way to Germany. All the incoming steamers and railway trains were being watched as were also the automobile highways. It dawned upon the police authorities that the man might try to come in aboard the Zeppelin in the belief that the big dirigible would not be watched upon its arrival. Hence the six men were rushed to Friedrichshafen, arriving there with only an hour or so to spare.

It was not made known whether they found their man among the passengers. In any event, no arrests were made.

BELMONT HOTEL ISSUES ADDED STOCK SHARES

Eight new directors, all connected with the Bowman management, were chosen yesterday at a meeting of the stockholders of the White Plains Belmont Hotel.

The session was called primarily for the purpose of reducing the mortgage and this was accomplished by raising the preferred stock issue to 2,500 shares instead of the 2,000 previously sold and the common stock from 7,000 to 9,000.

Henry S. Darrell, president of the corporation, said this morning that everything connected with the hotel was progressing finely and the corporation was extremely satisfied with the project to date.

"Johnny Goodman Won Because He Played Better Golf," Says Jones

By BOBBY JONES
(Present Open Champion)

JOHNNY GOODMAN

The golfer who eliminated Bobby Jones in the National Amateur. Bobby tells about his defeat in this article.

Since the finish of the amateur championship at Pebble Beach many people have asked me about my match with Johnny Goodman of Omaha, in which Johnny arranged for me a prompt exit from the competition. What sort of a player is this man? How did you feel? And what did you think of eighteen hole matches? are some of the questions.

One must realize that a tournament match over the short eighteen hole route especially when the going is pretty difficult affords very little opportunity to study the style and golfing capabilities of an opponent. While playing secretly that some shot will be astray and that some opening will be left, it is hard to detach oneself sufficiently to appraise fairly the merits of a swing. About all I observed was that Goodman is a very good looking golfer—compact and business-like—a player who appears at every moment to know what he intends to do the next. The best part of his game against me was undoubtedly his play around the greens, where all chip-shots were very close and every putable putt seemed destined for the bottom of the cup from the moment it was struck.

Golf a Gaiety Temperament

Johnny is only twenty years old, but he showed a splendid temperament in that match, never permitting anything to disturb his composure. If he was ever nervous it was imperceptible. Nor was he to detect the slightest trace. Throughout the entire match he went about his business calmly and without unnecessary delay. Always he was a pleasant friendly manner, but not with the garrulous friendliness which is such a nuisance on a golf course.

As for the match itself I must say in all frankness—although I do not favor eighteen hole matches for a championship if there is any fair way to avoid them—that it was not the eighteen hole system which beat me in the match with Goodman. Johnny won because he played better golf and that after I had stepped out of the lead and had drawn on even terms with him, a position which I failed to maintain for better simply because of my own mistakes.

It seems to me beyond question that the result was determined by the play on the thirteenth and fourteenth holes. Losing the first three holes, I had won the fourth with a stiff with three, lost the seventh through taking three putts, and won the eighth when Johnny failed to get down in two from the edge of the green. Halving the next two we reached the eleventh green with Goodman leading by one hole. There he holed a putt from the front edge of one green for a three and I got one of fifteen feet for a half.

The twelfth, a short hole, I won in three when Johnny was bunkered off the tee. Then came the thirteenth, Goodman's drive was somewhat shorter than mine, and his iron shot cut a bit, landed in a bunker to the right of the green. Having always been short on the hole, I determined this time to be up. My spade shot pitched over the flag to the far edge of the green and hopped into a wind put me into a bank over the green. A bad chip out finally resulted in my jumping a stymie to save a hole which should have been won.

The Sad Seventeenth

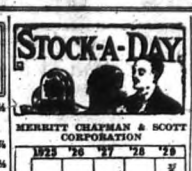
But the fourteenth was even worse for me. Johnny's tee shot landed in the rough on the right, his second under a tree on the left. After a drive and brassie fifty or sixty yards short of the green I counted the hole as good as lost for Goodman had no chance to reach the green on this third. He played an excellent running shot which brought up some fifteen or twenty yards short of the putting surface. That did it—making the shot heavily and flopping the pitch in a bunker short of the green where the ball buried. Johnny pitched beautifully to a yard from the hole and won when I failed to get close from the bunker.

That about ended the story for me for we halved each of the remaining holes in par figures. There was one mistake which followed which I shall always remember. It was Goodman's tee shot at the seventeenth. This hole is about 220 yards to a level green with the ocean beyond and to the left. It is by far the most exacting hole on the course. From the time that I lost the fourteenth and became one down I had looked forward to the seventeenth, almost as my only hope. The fifteenth, sixteenth and eighteenth were all easy pars and in the condition of my putting I had small hope of picking up a few birdies on either. But I figured that if Johnny was to give me a chance at all it would be at the seventeenth. I don't know if Johnny guessed what was in my mind but at any rate he gave me a complete surprise.

Playing across the sand he hit the most perfect spoon shot I have ever seen, as straight on a line to the flag as one could imagine and as it brought up seven or eight feet short of the hole, it was not hard to see that my confidence in bridge would soon be merely honorary.

It was a good match—one of the kind you don't mind so much losing—especially to a lad like Johnny Goodman.

STOCK-A-DAY



MERRITT CHAPMAN & SCOTT CORPORATION

The Merritt Chapman and Scott Corporation is one of the largest maritime wrecking and salvaging corporation in the western hemisphere. The company was formed in 1922 as a merger of two existing firms and now has a number of subsidiaries including one in Jamaica and one in Canada. Early this year the concern acquired the McLean Contracting Company of Baltimore. The operations of the company include maritime salvaging operations of all kinds, heavy derrick work, heavy lighterage work and construction work of all kinds under water and in connection with shore and harbor improvement, such as sea walls, breakwaters, piers and bridges. The concern also does railroad construction work. The company maintains salvage stations at New York, New London, Baltimore, Norfolk, Key West and San Pedro, Cal. About 100 vessels and complete gear are owned.

Net income in 1928 was $990,280, which compares with $684,298 in 1927. There is no funded debt but purchase money obligations amounting to $300,000 will presently be outstanding. The entire former bond issue was called for redemption early in 1929. Capital stock outstanding consists of $2,500,000 in 6 1-2 per cent cumulative preferred stock of $100 par and 270,000 shares of no par common. Each class has equal voting power. The preferred carries warrants non-detachable until Dec. 1, 1929, entitling the holder at any time to purchase a share of common at $3 (for each share of preferred held. Dividends have been paid regularly on the preferred. The common rate is 40 cents a share a quarter. As of January 1, 1929, total current assets were $3,279,613, current liabilities were $535,754 and net working capital was $2,743,859. Book value of the common was $14.28 a share.

URGE QUICK COMPLETION OF NEW SEWER

County Realty Board Asks Sanitary Commission to Speed Saw Mill Valley Project

The early completion of the Saw Mill River sewer contemplated by the Westchester County Sanitary Commission was urged by the Westchester County Realty Board of Governors at their regular September meeting held recently. The resolutions have been forwarded to the board of supervisors and to the sanitary commission.

It is felt that the Saw Mill River Valley section of the county within the last few years has experienced a quickening in its growth of population and the need of this trunk sewer system is becoming rapidly more apparent. The subdividers and developers and realtors of the county are urging the supervisors and the sanitary commission to action because it is felt by them that the county's best interests would be served by prompt county action on this proposed improvement.

The governors at this meeting also discussed the mortgage money market situation and framed resolutions which have been forwarded to the Westchester County Bankers' Association and to the National and State Association of Real Estate Boards, calling attention to their opinion that the present mortgage money market is the result of a condition that is economically wrong inasmuch as it diverts funds from the sound and wholesome financing of home ownership to the fostering of speculation in stocks and contains a menace to public welfare. The resolutions urge the associations addressed to give the matter their earnest consideration.

Thirteen new members were elected to the Westchester County Realty Board at this meeting. One applicant was rejected. The board now has a membership of between four and five hundred members.

Its annual meeting and election of officers for 1930 will be held on October 16 at the White Plains Belmont Hotel. It will be a dinner meeting.

$25,000 ACTION AGAINST BUS CO.

Suit for $25,000 against the Fordham Bus Corporation, New York City, is proposed in papers on file here today. The action is to be brought by Clara Mandeville of 38 First street, McLean Heights, Yonkers.

The action arises out of alleged-by permanent injuries she says she said to have been received by the plaintiff when the car in which she was riding was struck by a bus of the defendant company. The accident occurred on June 8 at the intersection of Bainbridge and Van Cortlandt avenues in the Bronx.

The plaintiff says that she is permanently scarred and will be prevented from pursuing her usual profession.

BUILDING FOR MONTH DROPS $1,895,671

Past Week Registered Lowest Total Since February, 1924 —Aggregate for Month Is Only $114,479

Figures released Saturday by William A. Brennan, Deputy Commissioner of Public Safety, indicating building for the week, reveal that not since February, 1924, have the building permits shown such a low total.

The sum for the week was $28,376 divided as follows: Two one-family houses, $29,000; one garage, $500, a residential alteration, $275, and one non-resident alteration, $2000.

The total for the month up to noon today is $114,479 as compared with $2,010,150 for September, 1928. With but two more days this month Deputy Commissioner Brennan expects no further building permits to be taken out.

Building to White Plains for the first nine months of this year are almost $2,000,000 below the mark set for last year. The total thus far for 1929 is $6,376,629 compared with $8,270,121 for last year.

Advertisements Are A Guide To Value

EXPERTS can roughly estimate the value of a product by looking at it. More accurately, by handling and examining it. Its appearance, its texture, the "feel" and the balance of it all mean something to their trained eyes and fingers.

But no one person can be an expert on steel, brass, wood, leather, foodstuffs, fabrics, and all of the materials that make up a list of personal purchases. And even experts are fooled, sometimes, by concealed flaws and imperfections.

There is a surer index of value than the senses of sight and touch . . . knowledge of the maker's name and for what it stands. Here is the most certain method, except that of actual use, for judging the value of any manufactured goods. Here is the only guarantee against careless workmanship, or the use of shoddy materials.

This is one important reason why it pays to read advertisements and to buy advertised goods. The product that is advertised is worthy of your confidence.
