Westchester First Churches Protest Youthful Bandit Male Shoplifter "The Red Flag"

Several Westchester churches protested in their Sunday services to the speakeasy situation in that city, declaring conditions intolerable and calling upon city officials and the press to take prompt action to suppress the speakeasy situation.

In the days of the saloon, the law said definitely how close to a church a saloon might locate and none had the daring to come so close to the churches as they have now. The speakeasy, operating in its illegal and secret traffic, however, is more daring. The proprietor of such a place, recognizing that it has no right to exist, feels that it has no right to be disturbed. It is a church as anywhere else. If he is caught, he will not receive any greater punishment than if he were caught in a saloon.

The Yankers' churchmen have no unusual complaint to make in this respect. Speakers are to be quite common found close to churches and we fancy that some of the speakers keep their speakeasy in their hands in the days when they were merely saloon-keepers.

Hittings-on-Taken reports a boy bandit just hidden tonight. This led, who is but fifteen years old, confessed to holding up a young woman on two different occasions and demanding her money. His excuse was that he needed money for the purchase of cigarettes.

Something is wrong, when a boy of fifteen is caught holding up a young woman. Something is wrong when a boy of fifteen is caught holding up a young woman. Something is wrong when a boy of fifteen is caught holding up a young woman.
