Adele Katz Gives the First of Series of Addresses Before Audience at Community Center

"It is the spirit behind the facts of all art that counts. It is the rhythmic impulse underlying the spirit of this century that we must study if we are to understand the music of that time." It was in this way that Miss Adele Katz started her course of lectures on the evolution and development of modern music Friday afternoon at the Jewish Community Center. The lectures are given under the auspices of the Women's Guild of the Community Center, and are presented by the National Council of Jewish Women.

"The German Reformation was the source of Bach's music," Miss Katz elaborating on the theme of her introduction to the course. "The 17th Century, the period of the French Revolution, which produced the music of the 18th Century, also great poets, philosophers and artists; Shelley and Keats, Corneille, Moliere and Voltaire, Milton and Watts.

"Man probably first discerned rhythm in his own blood," the speaker explained. "Then followed his tremendous rhythm of recurring hunger, the rhythm of night and day, the rhythm of the seasons, the rhythm of the stars and the planets. Primitive man probably took steps and made gestures prompted by the rhythm of his being, which was the beginning of the dance, just as cries of joy, gladness, grief, pain or victory were the beginning of song."

Miss Katz traced the periods of music step by step up through the age of polyphony and the Italian opera, the mentioned the standards and Hebrew contributions which were taken over into the church by the church fathers of the 4th century. "Greek music was not an independent art," she pointed out. "It was the handmaid of poetry. It had an ethical value and was meant to inspire noble dignified and beautiful thoughts. Anything appealing to the emotions was outlawed. It was really a refined, sustained Greek, and not so much as we understand it. The Hebrews had their instruments and psalms and a wealth of traditional melodies.

"The Italian opera of the 17th century had two sources, the mystery plays and the Roman comedy. The Italian opera of the 18th century had two sources, the mystery plays and the Roman comedy. Dr. Allison was graduated from the Queen's University Medical School in Belfast, but his studies at present serving as junior surgeon at the Royal Victoria Hospital in that city. He is the son of the late Lieutenant Colonel Hamilton, Allison, I. M. B., and Mrs. Mary Allison, of Hallow'en, Ontario. His date has been set for the wedding.

Chatterton Hill Women Meet

The Women's Association of the Chatterton Hill Church will hold its regular meeting on the 27th of Mrs. Harold Smith, 205 Chatterton Hill, will be the speaker at 8 o'clock. Mrs. J. J. Beaman, assistant secretary of the Home Mission Society, will be the speaker of the afternoon.

"collo" composed in honor of Pope Marcellus.

"In the Flemish School, the music of popular songs was often incorporated into the mass. The people sang the mass, while the people carried songs of their own which were taken over into the church by the church fathers of the 4th century. "Greek music was not an independent art," she pointed out. "It was the handmaid of poetry. It had an ethical value and was meant to inspire noble dignified and beautiful thoughts. Anything appealing to the emotions was outlawed. It was really a refined, sustained Greek, and not so much as we understand it. The Hebrews had their instruments and psalms and a wealth of traditional melodies.

The Reformation under Henry VIII was a great event in the history of the church. He gave it to the people. Then came the period of the great English composers, the other arts.
