JONES FINE RECORD made 215 points while opposing teams made 79. In the nine games played thus far this year the Army has secured 25 points against 96.

When the Army football team plays Stanford at Palo Alto, December 28, Captain Lawrence ("Bill") Jones will be closing a brilliant career as head football coach at the United States Military Academy. After this game Jones will turn over the coaching job to Major Ralph Means, new teacher of the Army's most successful and this year when Army had its poorest record under Jones, Capt. Jones failed to reach the heights of previous campaigns.

The coming of Jones to West Point as assistant to Captain John McKean meant the development of a higher type of line play. This improved style grew stronger with Jones' appointment as head coach of the Cadets and this year Jones' team was defeated by Yale, Illinois and Notre Dame and tied by Harvard.

This four-year record is one of the most prize-worthy football careers for any coach during this period. Army teams under Jones have been powerful defensive machines, and high scoring combinations as well. Only one of his teams failed to pass the 200-point mark in scoring the 1927 outfit, stopping at 197 points. The high mark for his ten years came the fall with the 59 to 0 victory over Dickinson.

In 1928 Army scored 260 points and held opponents to 77. The following year the Cadets outscored their rivals 197 to 37, and in 1925

Dartmouth Wins From Vermont Five

The Dartmouth basketball team had little opposition in opening its season last night and ended the University of Vermont, 63 to 41 at Hanover. Gray Magee, a reserve guard for the Green, led the scoring with five baskets and a trio of foul shots for thirteen points. Dartmouth's defense functioned as well as its attack and Vermont was able to garner only three field goals during the entire evening. Dolly Stark's Green five seabed some pretty passing at times, but the game on the whole was loosely played. The second half saw an improvement in Dartmouth's play, especially with Lewin back at his old center post. Ben Burch and Irving Kramer, sophomores, gave creditable performances in their first varsity contest.
