BERLIN

BY MAURITZ A. HALLGREN
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Berlin (UP)—There is a landlord in Berlin who absolutely refuses to let tenants bring ghosts with them into his apartments. He has gone to court to ask for permission to eject a family that, he alleges, has been harboring an all too active spirit in their rooms.

According to popular report, not only undenied by the family but actually confirmed by the family pastor, the ghost is that of an unruly, eleven-year-old Lucy Reguleki, the only person now alive to whom the apparition has appeared. Other members of the family, however, have heard the noises made by the unearthly fellow during his nocturnal calls upon his niece, and years ago, it is said, Lucy's grandmother was once favored with a visit from her then recently deceased son.

Family ghosts may be all right in their way, the owner of the building suggests in his petition to the court, but "persons possessing them should at least have the common courtesy to report the fact before signing leases on new apartments." Reguleki says, can be very disturbing as apparently they have been in the case of Uncle Reguleki. The landlord argues that the Reguleki's must have known of the existence of this ghost before they moved in because it had once called upon the grandmother. It is his contention that its occasional presence in Lucy's bedroom, but more especially the effect that its presence there has had on neighborhood opinion, will result in decreasing to his financial loss, the desirability of his apartments as living quarters and thus also eventually lower the market value of the building.

Just to play safe, in the event that there really are no such things as ghosts, he included in his petition another plea in which he asserts that the entire affair is probably a hoax upon the part of the Family Reguleki, that the ghost has been invented by them for unexplained but nevertheless sinister reasons. In either case, he feels he is being damaged and he wants to dump the Reguleki, ghost and all, out into the street.

Meanwhile spiritualists and other persons learned in the ways of manes and wraiths have been cooperating with the Reguleki in trying to lay low the secret of this restless uncle.

In 1924 the city fathers of the municipality of Gartz decided they wanted a new bridge to span the River Oder. They let out the contracts for erection of a modern and substantial span that was to stand for many, many years. In 1925 construction was begun and in April, 1926, the task was completed.

Six months later the bridge, with a fearful sound appropriate to the crashing of timbers and steel, collapsed. Thereupon the city fathers sued the builders and now the builders are trying to defend themselves by blaming the fish that once swam the River Oder.

Numerous expert witnesses have been assembled to testify in behalf of the defense. In a preliminary hearing these engineers and chemists asserted that the collapse was attributable to the weakening of some of the piles upon which the bridge rested. The piles, they continued, had been materially affected by a change in the chemical elements in the water and this change had in turn been brought about by the death and decaying of a great number of fish that had been killed during the flood of 1926.

LAWYER FINDS PORTRAIT OF WIFE AT 16

Idle Glance in Shop Window Reveals Picture; Whereabouts Was Unknown

A Christmas present which he purchased for himself and which he prizes far above any other received this year is today in the home of former District Attorney Arthur Rowland in Yonkers.

It began Christmas Eve when the former county official was shopping in New York City. At 46th street and Sixth avenue he paused idly to glance into a window. There he gazed at a portrait of his wife, done when she was 16 years old. He went and bought the picture.

"This picture is now mine, isn't it?" he asked the shop keeper.

"Certainly."

"Then I'll tell you," said Rowland, "that it is a portrait of my wife and I would have paid ten times what you asked."

"If I had known it was your wife I would have been happy to present you with the picture," retorted the shopkeeper.

The whereabouts since it was painted remain a mystery to the Rowland family since this is the first time it has been in their possession. The former district attorney vows it will remain a family heirloom.
