Katonah News.

Pure comb honey at Doyle Bros.
Don't miss reading the article on our editorial page regarding the largest garage in the state, owned by our townsman, Wm. G. Barrett.
The strawberry supper in the Methodist church was a great success and over $100 were added to the treasury.
Children's Day service will be held in the M. E. church on Sunday morning, and in connection with it a service of infant baptism.
Kellogg & Mead are offering their line of enamel ware for one more week at the exceedingly low price, the quality of goods considered.
Mr. Kelley is continuing his series of sermons on "Incidents in the Life of Christ." On Sunday evening the topic will be "Jesus at the Well of Samaria."
Mr. F. W. Gorham, the druggist, has a clerk on duty for the summer months. Mr. Gorham has a good business this season of the year supplying soft drinks from his fountain.
Drink! Drink! Drink! G. & C. Imported Ginger Ale, French Vichy, Apollinaris and White Rock.—Doyle Brothers.
Queen Olives, the finest grades of Olive Oil, and in fact all the dainties of the season for the table can be had in our Up-to-date Grocery Department.—HOYT BROS. COMPANY.
The tenth annual meeting of the District Nursing Association of Northern Westchester County will be held at the Mount Kisco opera-house on Tuesday, June 16th, at four o'clock. All persons interested are cordially invited to attend this meeting.
Next week we will give a list and names of all the country estates and gentlemen's residences together with owner's names, in this vicinity. This list will be kept standing and published from time to time. The list may be incomplete at first, but it will be added to and the name of any country home omitted will be gladly received.

Anti-Gambling Bills Passed

Yesterday the State Senate, with the aid of the votes of Senators Foelker and Wallace, passed Gov. Hughes' anti-racetrack gambling bills. The vote was 28 to 25. Those who opposed the bill fought to the very last, but were unable to change the vote of a single senator.
The hope is surely being everywhere expressed, and we earnestly join in it, that Senator Foelker's heroic trip to Albany will not prove too costly, but that he will escape permanent ill results from the strain of travel and the excitement of attendance at that dramatic session of the Senate.
The result is a great personal triumph for Governor Hughes and will add immensely to his prestige. When in his message of last January he urged the passage of the anti-gambling legislation, few realized what a force of public opinion he would enlist in his support. He has won a truly great victory.

Doyle Brothers have added a fine, large awning with a large sign printed on it, to their grocery store on Katonah avenue.

The seven teachers hired for the coming year are as follows: C. A. Wallace, Principal; Miss Irene B. Adams, Preceptress; Miss Lavinia S. Cole, 8th grade and music; Miss Belle Murphy, 6th and 7th grades; Miss Adelaide E. Arnold, 4th and 5th grades; Miss Jetta R. Bailey, 2d and 3d grades, and Miss J. McKnight, Primary. The school another year promises to be even larger than the past year. The principal anticipates over 50 in the primary department and the other rooms ranging from thirty to fifty. The high school department will be larger than ever before and Principal Wallace estimates thirty-five outside of the eighth grade. In view of the large number of scholars the board of education should consider the advisability of having a four years' high school course instead of a three years' course, as at present. This would necessitate the hiring of one more teacher in the high school department.

The Home Missionary Society of the M. E. church will meet with Mrs. L. W. Elliott on Wednesday, June 17th, at 3 p. m.

The Standard Bearers, of the M. E. Sunday school, will hold an open meeting in the church on Friday evening, June 19, at which Miss Jennie Kane, of Ocean Grove, N. J., the superintendent of the New York branch, will deliver an address, and a program will be rendered by the Standard Bearers.

F. H. Lent is the latest disciple of Ik Walton and has become an expert angler. His accounts of his catches are worth listening to, and according to them he is able to supply all his friends with fine specimens of the finny tribe, fresh from the lake. As for ourselves we haven't as yet seen any of them.

News and Views of Cherry Street.

Mr. Brower, who has been growing steadily younger and spryer ever since he celebrated his 81st birthday, until the neighbors now expect to see him climbing after cherries and "skinning the cat," has lately announced a novel theory of the moral character of crows.

These birds, he says, are the victims of long standing prejudice. Black as their feathers are, he thinks their hearts are white. They are not robbers but benefactors, and suffer obliquely unmerited, like other unfortunates who strive to do good to unworthy men. When a crow visits a cornfield, says Mr. Brower, he goes with intent to search out and exterminate a certain ill-favored white slug which lurks underground to the great peril of the growing stalk. "I have often followed around the field," says Mr. Brower, "where the crows have pulled up corn and by closely observing the ground I have discovered that wherever the earth was disturbed there were traces of the mangled remains of these destructive slugs. It was them and not, as most people think, the grains of young corn that the crows wanted to eat." Thus is a new light thrown on an old and painful subject.

The herd of wild cattle is again on the rampage up and down our otherwise quiet thoroughfare. The residents speak of the road as the "Fifth Avenue of Katonah," and it pains them to have these predatory ungoverned bovines stampeding up and down, to the great peril of life and limb and sure destruction of flower gardens. The summer boarder girl, who begins to be in evidence, is frightened out of her wits, at the sound of bellowing, and even John Quick's peaceful black cow makes her nervous by association of ideas. Periodically this rampaging herd, led by a wild-eyed bullock, sallies forth with a thunderous noise to spread terror and devastation on all sides. The good people are so frightened that a cow's lowing is enough to send them fleeing to their attic cyclone cellars.

What I Know about the Business Men of our Village.

(With profound apologies to A. J. C.)
Now there's David A. Doyle! Genial, urbane David—over smiling like the unclouded sun in heaven. He will hand you out a pound of butter or a slice of political patronage with the same grace that won the late Lord Chesterfield an immortal reputation. Nothing ever surprises David. If the ice is late and the cream threatened with dissolution, the postoffice buzzing like a beehive, and a dozen leading statesmen calling him to confer upon some weighty matter of public import, you will still find David at his post of duty, unperturbed and ready for all emergencies.
Brother Francis may look harried under the strain of the moment, brother William may appear reserved and haughty, but David has never altered that sympathetic, easy manner which (could he be spared from our community) would make him an ornament to the diplomatic corps of his country, or, at the very least, Secretary of State.
The list of his activities is an impressive one. Besides the leading share he has in one of the biggest grocery firms in town, he runs farms, deals in real estate, promotes residential "parks" for the overflowing population of New York city, attends state conventions and incidentally handles our mail for us in a manner eminently satisfactory. He more than earns the title of "leading citizen" which is accorded him by all right thinking people.
May his shadow never grow less!

The Stately Homes of Westchester and how They are Named.

After building your home the next thing is to give it a name, unless, indeed, you happen to be a miserable dweller in a city where they give you a number, like a prison inmate.
This naming is dictated partly by natural pride (sometimes swelling to ostentation), partly by regard for convenience, and chiefly by long standing custom. It is usually a brain-racking process with results sometimes happy, sometimes just funny and often colorless. We know a black lady whose thumb-marked correspondence, on the subject of the week's wash, was always dated "Road View Cottage," a title appropriate enough but lacking in the needful quality of distinction. A friend of ours, whose house stood high upon a pine clad hill at some distance from the station, asked a city visitor, sadly blown with walking thither, to suggest a name. "Why," said the newcomer, glancing at a stunted pine tree in the foreground, "why not call it 'Blested Fir'?"
Here in transformed Westchester County the influx of notable families has produced a long list of varied titles, all more or less characteristic.

What more appropriate to the simple dignity of the old Jay homestead, dominating our eastern hills, than the name "Bedford House," by which it has been known throughout the countryside for more than a century. And the neighboring place, owned by Clarence Whitman, president of the Merchant's Association, of New York, is fitly called "Katonah's Wood." It is near the site of the big house that the famous old Indian chief lived, died and was buried long before white men and motor cars began to infest the land.
Old Indian names have been used in several instances to designate luxurious modern homes. There is "Aspetong," the place purchased by Dr. Lefferts from the late James Lounsbury; "Ar-sorn," the Hamilton Hopkin place; "Aratoma," often confused with the last mentioned and which designates the home of Frank Potter brother of Bishop Potter.
Whether Richard Lounsbury had in mind an Indian name or some famous race horse is uncertain, but he calls his Bedford house "Jocunita." "White Gates Farm" is the name of Henry Marquand's residence; "Red Brook Farm" of Hon. Seth Lothrop; "Anandale Farm" is Moses Taylor's. "Uplands" the Bordén firmans call their place, in spite of a suggestion made by P. F. Dunne ("Mr. Dooley") who when dining here one day and discussing the subject remarked that, considering the constant flow of guests and the good fare provided, it might be appropriately known as "The Boon House."

John J. D. Layng named his place by reversing the letters of his daughter's name, "Agnes" and calling it "Sengalurst." Robert Van Landt found ready a name for his place in the old familiar designation of the locality, "Guard Hill," the place where in revolutionary days cannon fires were kindled to rouse the countryside.

Communication.

To the Editor of the KATONAH TIMES.
My Dear Sir:—
I wish through your columns, in the name of God, to deny those false charges against me, which appeared in a recent article, in the N. Y. World, and afterwards quoted in the "Katonah Times." Evidently because of a mistake, someone is trying to destroy my character and reputation, and the slanderer must suffer the penalty.
Rev. J. A. SMITH.

Prizes for Neatly Kept Lawns.

The Bedford-New Castle Association has offered one hundred dollars to be given in prizes for the best kept lawns or door yards in the two towns, the work to be done by the members of the family in each case. For the present year it has been proposed to make the plan known through the schools. The sum of twenty dollars is to be allotted to Katonah and vicinity, to be distributed in three prizes of $10, $6 and $4 for work done and for general improvement between June 1 and September 30. Those who desire to enter the competition should register their names with Principal Wallace on or before Monday, June 15.

Black Hand Men Threaten Two Bedford Citizens.

No trace has been obtained of the two Black Hand Society desperadoes who sent letters threatening death to Isaac W. Turner, president of the Village of Mount Kisco and George Raymond, a farmer of Bedford.
Last Friday night the home of Mr. Raymond was guarded by constables and the farmer had several guns within it with which to defend himself. Both Mrs. Turner and Mrs. Raymond were hysterical over the letters received.
Mr. Turner, who has settled in Mt. Kisco a few years ago, is known as the "Lodging House King," having amassed a fortune through the ownership of a string of lodging houses in the city. The letter threatening President Turner tells him to take care of himself when he is walking along the Bowery.
Mr. Raymond and President Turner, after Sheriff Lane's men and several constables had failed to trap the writers of the letters, induced the Sheriff to appeal to Commissioner Bingham, with the result that several experts from the Italian bureau and a couple of Central Office men have been detailed to the case.
Three letters were sent to Mr. Raymond. The first was addressed to Mr. and Mrs. Raymond.
The last letter received on Thursday afternoon of last week was mailed in Bedford at 9 o'clock. There was a special delivery stamp on it.
He called up Sheriff Lane at White Plains, and it was planned to trap the men. It was suggested that Mr. Raymond go to the point indicated in the letter and that constables and deputy sheriffs surround the place. Mr. Raymond refused to be used as a decoy. Constable Kinkle, who is about the size of the farmer, agreed to impersonate him.
When it had grown good and dark, Kinkle left the farm house. Constables Russell and Weber were in a wagon near the bridge. Soon they saw a couple of men come out of the woods further down the road.
"What do you want?" asked the constables.
"We are here for the same thing you are," said one of the men.
"Sheriff's men," said the constables to themselves. The two men came close and then, leveling revolvers at the two constables, said:
"You get out of here as fast as you can go."
The two guardians of the peace caught sight of the long, shining gun barrel gleaming in the moonlight and turned and whipped up their horses, although they had guns in the wagon.
