it, to show this. Toinette looked through those all, a lurid light in her eyes. She should have been mistress here—might be even yet. The resources of wealth and taste had been exhausted to make the place bright and beautiful.

"The way is clear," she said to herself, with a feeling of exultation. "I may venture to put in execution my little plot. The morning of the eighth day she went to Highlands and saw Mrs. Rusk for a few moments."

"It was my sweet little wife who filled all my thoughts. Your sad, reproachful face as I saw it last, was rising constantly before my eyes. How I bawled heaven to restore to me my arms, that I might atone for my harshness and cruelty by a life-time of devotion!"

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.
