

From The Bible

He who is slow to anger has great understanding. —(Prov. 14:29).

Perhaps the most important spiritual quality that should be expressed toward life is the love of God. When we are aware of His love and make a sincere effort to pour forth this love to all persons and all situations, we have the sure cure for our problems. Let us build in a feeling of God's love as we walk through our days to meet only love and understanding.

He Knows Because He Sees

After recent uprisings in which Viet Cong guerrillas visited death and destruction on South Vietnamese cities and villages, many wondered what turn the war would take next. Time may prove otherwise. An inkling of why the Viet Cong attacks failed may be found in the comments of Rear Admiral James W. Kelley, chief of Chaplains, U. S. Navy, who had daily contact with the war in Vietnam. He says, "My observation of the morale of the troops is that morale is high, steady, high, and stable and consistent. But why?"

The essential difference between high and low morale is found in the combat troop's perspective. He sees all around him evidences of what Viet Cong terrorists have done to the South Vietnamese people in the hamlets. No one needs to tell about the terrible suffering of the South Vietnamese people at the hands of terrorist gangsters. No one can tell him it doesn't happen or isn't serious or is not as bad as it is depicted. He knows because he sees.

Any course which would lead to abandonment of a desperate people in their hour of need seems to him to be unthinkable and un-American. . . . All the sophisticated arguments in the world will not alter the truth of the situation he himself sees. These words go a long way toward explaining why we in Vietnam and why we very likely will remain there for the foreseeable future.

National Library Week

April 21-27 will mark the observance of National Library Week. The purpose of this occasion is to encourage the development of lifetime reading habits as the foundation of a better informed people. Within our nation's libraries are stored all the riches of the world's literature. Scientific and technical knowledge, philosophy, economics, art, politics—every area of significant human interest—await the exploring mind.

When man learned to record his accomplishments, permanently storing the sum of his knowledge, progress became a cumulative thing; each generation building upon the progress of the past. Without this, we would very likely be living in a primitive state. Mankind must summon the wisdom of the ages and harness technologies yet unborn to build a peaceful and a better world for the future. Our libraries are a basic tool of learning and research—a priceless asset to a nation that would set its course upon the path of leadership in a complex and changing world.

As a part of a "Reading Nation," visit your Newark Public Library during National Library Week.

Secret of Food Supplies

We hear a great deal about developed and underdeveloped nations. Just what is the distinction and what are the symptoms of an underdeveloped nation, and why are some nations more developed than others? These questions are of course not susceptible to pat answers because the answers must take into factors of geography, climate, politics and human capabilities that are complex in the extreme. But, a few facts hold so into the record.

Today, when we speak of an underdeveloped country, we are speaking of a country where the people do not have enough food; where technology lags so far behind needs that there is no way to sustain an expanding population. More and more, the symptoms of an underdeveloped country is malnutrition and starvation. The United States is conceded to be one of the most developed countries on earth and its people are the best fed and best clothed. Our technology is superior and is so far advanced that a substantial portion of our resources are today being stave off famine in other countries.

Nowhere is the evidence of our development more apparent than in agriculture. Long ago, farmers, industry, and the research laboratory teamed up to make our land the most productive on earth. New industries were founded on the requirements of the farmer and the soaring demand for food and fiber. For example, within a comparatively few years, the science of chemical pesticides has completely changed the food picture.

With the application of intelligent national and international policies, the family of pesticides, without which we have had so many old wives tales, could play an immeasurable part in relieving the threat of famine and hunger over much of the world. Yes, the United States is a developed nation, but its development has been no accident. It is traceable to one factor more than any other—the independence of its citizens—in business, in industry, in the laboratory and on the farm.

Mr. George Champion, chairman of the board of the Chase Manhattan Bank, has noted, "I can think of nothing that would put the brakes on big government faster than for business to identify critical problems and take the initiative in dealing with them before Washington felt the need to act."

Rehearse 'Escape from Fire' Plan

Has your family rehearsed its "escape from fire" plan recently? If not, Spring Clean-Up Week is a good time to do so.

The American Insurance Association gives these suggestions:

1—Tonight, gather all members of the household together and point out that in the event of fire, everyone should know alternate routes of escape from any part of the house or apartment.

2—Have an EDITH practice drill (Exit Drills—in the home). Simulate a fire emergency at night, when everyone is asleep. Have all members of the family go to their bedrooms and lie down; then shout "Fire!" Everyone in the average one-story house should be able to get outside in less than a minute.

3—If there are very small children in the home, assign a responsible teen-ager to the job of seeing to it that they get out of the building. A responsible person should also be assigned to the job of getting the elderly out of the house or apartment.

4—Impress upon all members of the family that in the event of fire, they should leave the building quickly, and gather in an agreed on location. Also make it clear that no one, under any circumstances, should ever re-enter a burning building.

People's Forum

Editor Courier-Gazette Most people only write this column when they have an axe to grind or some fault to find (as I have myself) but this is a letter of gratitude and praise.

I'm very grateful for our public library and have only praise for the nice people that work there. It is bright, clean and attractive, and the quantity and quality of books available to us all is amazing. This wonderful facility has afforded me many hours of pleasure and I would like to take this opportunity to thank everyone working in and responsible for our public library.

Speaking of the Dollar Drain

Health for All

Habitual throat-clearing and coughing are so common among dwellers in today's irritant-loaded environment, they're apt to pass unnoticed. That might not be so bad if it weren't for the fact that the habitual cougher fails to notice it himself. Or if he is aware of it, he yields to the temptation to shrug it off.

Actually, it's a little late in the day to pretend that persistent coughing is just a harmless little idiosyncrasy. The days when a cough was just a cough and what of it are as obsolete as the mustache cup.

Years of research and medical history have confirmed the fact that a chronic cough may be a symptom of respiratory disease which may seriously threaten health or even life. This fact has been emphasized to the general public repeatedly by official and voluntary health agencies, since the National Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association launched its first nationwide R.D. educational campaign in 1963 with the slogan, "Short of breath? Cough too much? See your doctor—you may have a respiratory disease."

The Health Association of Wayne County, local affiliate of the N. T. A., urges those who suffer with chronic cough or shortness of breath to follow this suggestion. A cough is considered chronic if it persists beyond three or four weeks, or if it clears up but keeps coming back. Such a cough can be symptomatic of a chronic respiratory disease such as emphysema, chronic bronchitis, asthma, TB, or lung cancer. The earlier such an ailment is diagnosed the better the chance of its being treated effectively. If you have a cough you can't shake off, two immediate courses of action are advisable: stop smoking, and see your doctor.

Your Christmas Seal organization has an information leaflet, "Chronic Cough, The Facts" Ask for it—it's free and available from the Health Association of Wayne County, Inc., 113 W. Miller St., Newark, N. Y., 14513 or phone 331-1317.

Horton Praises LBJ Decision To Halt Bombing

By CONGRESSMAN FRANK HORTON

The President has announced a halt to the bombing of all but militarily essential areas of North Vietnam near the DMZ. This decision has opened a new door of hope for all Americans and for all the world's people who sincerely want peace.

In light of recent military developments in Vietnam, and political developments at home, the President's decision was a very difficult one. He resisted the call by military leaders for a new escalation of the war, and instead chose unilateral de-escalation as a demonstration of America's active determination for peace, and of our restraint in the use of arms as an instrument of foreign policy.

I recommended a similar bombing halt several months ago, but this decision was the President's alone. He underscored its sincerity by putting his own future on the line—in the hope that by taking away any trace of personal political ambition, he could bring us closer to an honorable peace.

I ask my constituents and all Americans to pray that our yearning for peace spreads across the 17th parallel, in response to this bold decision, and to pray that soon, the youth and dollars which are holding the line against communist expansion in Asia, can be applied to the urgent problems we face at home.

Advise Families To Check Labels Safety Council

The National Safety Council advises families to check their medicine cabinets and retain only those medications that were purchased recently and are labeled for instant identification.

The Council warns that some compounds deteriorate with age, while others become dangerously strong through evaporation. Discard unlabeled containers.

Don't Leave Tots At Home Alone

Here's a thought to remember, not only during Spring Clean-Up Week, but the year round: Fires in the United States claimed 12,200 lives in 1967, says the American Insurance Association.

More than half of the fire deaths occurred in homes, and about one-third of these fatalities were children.

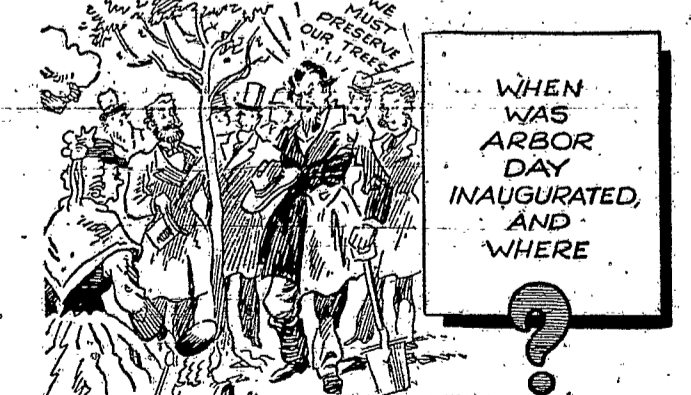

The Association urges: Never invite disaster—which could mean a fatal fire—by leaving little children at home alone.
