A BIG BOOST FOR GOOD ROADS.

On Aug. 20 and 21 an unusual good roads campaign was carried out in the state of Missouri. As the result of an appeal by Governor Major a vast army of men, estimated at a quarter of a million, and mule teams put in two days' work improving the highways of the state. The work of these men and teams was volunteered, and in many cases where physical disability prevented working money was donated to hire a substitute. For the purpose of emphasizing the governor's appeal, the county courts (supervisors) of practically every county issued appeals to citizens to give two days' work. In nearly every section the work was systematized, the road overseers of the various districts having charge of the volunteers, so that the greatest amount of good could be accomplished. Boys that were too small to do road work were kept busy carrying water and running errands. In many of the larger cities boy scouts volunteered to serve in any capacity in which they were needed. The use of implements needed in doing the road work was contributed by many dealers, who felt that they had a common interest with other citizens in the making of better roads. There is little question that this rather spectacular campaign will be worth more as a means of calling public attention to the need of better roads in a rather striking way than in the actual work accomplished during the two days it lasted, as a week's wet spell will undo a great part of the good work accomplished, the work being done on dirt roads and not on permanent highways. But in any event the campaign is commendable, and it is to be hoped that the spirit on the part of Missourians which prompted it will prove catching.

DRIED SWEET CORN.

Dried sweet corn may be sort of old fashioned, but when it is secured at the proper time and properly dried it is preferred by many to the best grade of canned corn. For drying purposes, corn should be selected that is considered prime for the table, neat, but not tough. It should be carefully husked and all silks removed. The ears should then be put in boiling water and allowed to cook for four or five minutes. It should then be cut from the cobs and put on plates or in pans to dry. If weather conditions are not favorable for drying in the sun, the drying may be done by low heat in the oven with the door left slightly open to prevent burning. The crop of sweet corn that will be canned this season is not more than 50 per cent of the normal, hence the housewife who wishes to manage economically should salt or dry what corn she can, for the prices of the canned goods will range considerably higher than last year.

IN BLACK AND WHITE.

For the benefit of the farmer who is in doubt whether he will pay him to put up a silo some definite figures may be given. It has been found that under ordinary conditions 100 pounds of milk can be produced, for 60 cents when ensilage is used, while the same quantity without the silo costs $1.03. The cost of producing a pound of butter fat is but 13 cents if silage is used, but 22 cents per pound by the old dry feed method. Again, the cheapest beet as well as that which fetches the highest price on the market is that produced by a silage-legume ration. Another advantage of the silc which should have weight with the farmer having a limited number of acres is that it makes possible the storing of a maximum amount of feed in a minimum space and in this connection it is well to remember, too, that an acre of corn will furnish more tons of feed than that put to any other crop.

A SWEET CLOVER PICNIC.

A sweet clover picnic was held the other day at a farm in southern Iowa. One hundred acres of this farm are devoted to the growing of this legume, which until recently has been considered in the light of a worthless weed. The picnic was attended for the first time when the crop was to be cut and there were present, besides many farmers of the county, adjacent sections of agricultural papers and representatives of more than one state university station. The crop was very thrifty and was cut for several experiments in the feeding of sweet clover as pasture and hay and to show that when stock get used to it they eat it readily and do well on it. As a soil renovator it is the equal of alfalfa and other clovers and has the advantage that it grows thriftily on the thinnest and most unpropitious kind of soil.

Circumstantial Evidence

By DAVID WALTER CHURCH

A stagecoach lumbered along through the rocky mountains in the region of a newly discovered mining district. In it were three women and four men. One of the men had a young face, but was prematurely gray. He kept his fellow passengers from becoming ill by telling stories and otherwise amusing them. When the coach reached a relay he left it and those he had entertained were sorry to part with him.

The coach had not gone far on the next relay before the passengers heard pistol shots, and the body of the driver came tumbling down from the box, immediately a man with white hair and whose name was concealed by a mask rode to the side of the coach where the passengers could see him and ordered them to step out, line up and disperse. The order was obeyed by all except one man who, snatching his opportunity, struck the robber a blow on the cheek; the strings which tied on his mask were broken and it fell to the ground, revealing a face that excited the astonishment of all.

In the robber they recognized their fellow traveler who had but recently parted from them.

He shot the man who had attacked him, collected the valuables of the passengers and rode away. One of the men mounted to the box and drove to the next relay.

The robbery was reported and a description of the robber given. A posse was organized and scoured the country round about. But they did not have to go far to find their man. He was found on the porch of a tavern smoking a cigar. After looking at him a moment the sheriff arrested him. "What do you want with me?" he asked in real or pretended astonishment.

"You're wanted for the robbery of the coach that was held up and the murder of two persons. What's your name?"

"Edward Livermore. If that's your name, we're going to take you to the county seat to be tried. Come along." Livermore assured the men that they were making a mistake but they paid no attention to what he said and took him to jail. He begged to have a speedy trial since he was looking for mining property and the mistake that had been made was delaying him. His request was granted partly because the evidence of the other passengers of the coach in which he had traveled was required and they were anxious to go about their business.

At the trial every one of them swore that Livermore was the robber and murderer. Another thing against him was that he had come to the tavern on a horse the same color as the robber had ridden when the coach was attacked. Livermore explained this by saying that he had hired the horse near the relay where he had left the coach.

Not a person in the courtroom but believed the prisoner, and the robber were the same person. He had but little evidence to give in his behalf, and when it was in the public prosecutor rested the case. The judge instructed the jury, which retired and in half an hour returned with a verdict of guilty.

The judge was about to pass sentence when a man, who said he was a barber, entered the courtroom and asked to be heard. He said that the day before the robbery a man, who resembled the accused, had entered his shop to be shaved. During the shaving he had talked with the barber, who told him that he had recently come from the east with a trunk of a stick, including some wigs. The customer had purchased a white one.

This testimony made an impression on all in court except the judge. He considered it for a few minutes, then announced that he had decided not to regard it. Six fellow passengers of the prisoner had sworn that he was the murderer. The story of the barber was on its face a cheap device on the part of some friend to save him. It would not accord with the laws of evidence to regard it conflicting as it did with the testimony of so many disinterested witnesses of good character.

Livermore simply declared his innocence, saying that the real robber had bought the white wig for a disguise to help conceal his identity. The witnesses had been deceived by the similarity in the appearance of the two men.

Having listened to this statement the judge passed the sentence, condemning the convicted man to be hanged on a certain date. He died protesting his innocence and predicting that some day the real murderer would turn up.

The murder and execution were followed by other robberies, apparently by different persons, for no two were dressed alike or looked alike, though being always masked, their faces were never seen. Finally one of them was arrested and convicted. The evening before he was swung off he confessed that he had committed all these crimes in different disguises, the first being the murder for which Livermore had been executed. His resemblance to Livermore was very strong. When a white wig was put on his head several of those who had testified against Livermore saw the error and felt they had sent an innocent man to the gallows. The crime was executed, but it was not possible to bring Livermore back to life.

Editor Hoag Confesses

For many years, as Editor and Proprietor of the Pine Plains, N. Y., Herald, I have advertised Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. While I enjoyed not only the business relationship but the personal friendship of Dr. Kennedy, I have never, until now, paid him a long standing obligation. For many years, as my friends so well know, I suffered excruciating pains from rheumatism. Many were the nights when it was impossible to sleep. Without much faith, I tried as a last resort, a bottle of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, just as thousands of others had done before, and like them I found permanent relief. Favorite Remedy has stood the test of time and I believe it is the best medicine in existence for effectually expelling the cause of rheumatism—uric acid. My regret is that I have neglected to make this frank confession long ago. It makes my kidneys do their work properly, tones up the liver and makes one feel that life is worth living. I publicly and earnestly advise all my friends who are suffering from troubles that arise from unhealthy kidneys and liver, to get a bottle of Favorite Remedy at once. There is no use in putting it off as I did. S. T. HOAG, Editor. Write to Dr. David Kennedy Co., Rondout, N. Y., for free sample bottle and free medical book containing valuable information. Record for Laziness.

The laziest man is reported in Arkansas, where he conducts a shoe store in a little town. A woman entered his shop one day and said she wanted to buy a pair of shoes. The lazy man, who was sitting on a box at one end of his establishment, looked at her, yawned wearily and then said "I can't wait on you today. Come in some time when I'm standin' up."—San Francisco Argonaut
