CLIFF PARHAM

On Tuesday morning, I walked down Jefferson Ave., just looking. I cannot say for what. Any way, I had hoped to find something of interest to write about. Believe me I did.

It is a shame for a city of this size and population, to permit a cross town street to be as filthy as Jefferson Ave., and named in honor of a President.

Paper was seen all over the place. It could almost be picked up and turned into a rubbish yard. There were only two business places with clean fronts. I will not mention the names of either of them, but both establishments had washed their fronts. They were not the Negro-owned places. Wake up Mr. Black business man.

East Ferry Street isn't any better. It may be worse.

I wonder how a man feels to open his store, walk in, and find it is clean? I have walked through that filth, I don't have to face it again. I'm sorry for you. I'm also sorry for you about the people who spend money with you. Don't they count? Any business man should be concerned about his customers and what they think about a place where they spend their money.

People are talking about Jefferson Ave., and the people who are still there. This could be a better street. If there were a little more interest in this community by people who live in it, rather than by some who live in other places. A few years back, this was a well kept street, with the side walks cleaned everyday. This is not so now. Why?

* * * * *

Some places are still boarded up from 1967. Why? I don't think owners will have to worry about that again.

* * * * *

In the back of another place, I wish you could see it. I go going to tell the owner about it and if it's not moved, I am going to make a picture and publish it, and the name of the place. This place has deteriorated since 1955. I know it can never be the same.

* * * * *

The city could do a much better job too, if the issue was brought to the front. The representatives just don't care. There is a lot wrong. Some time you can report them and get response.

Let us have a clean Jefferson Avenue and clean East Ferry St.

JOBS is breaking up that old gang of mine

The old gang, guys who dropped out, got strung out, guys who hung out with no place to go but trouble. They want to work, thanks to JOBS.

JOBS, that's Job Opportunities in the Business Sector. A program of the National Alliance of Businessmen. The gangs have started to die, the guys have started to live.

JOBS has turned over 300,000 hard-core unemployables and managed. Given guys their first good breaks. Of course it isn't perfect. Of course it could be better. But it's working.

The National Alliance of Businessmen was formed by American business communities to help solve the critical problem of hard-core unemployment. Business provides the jobs and does the hiring and training. Government finds the people and plays the extraordinary training costs through special contracts.

Funds for the new JOBS 70 contracts are available right now. So, if you're an employer for a business or nonprofit organization, do yourself a favor. Call your local National Alliance of Businessmen.

Replacement for Oxen

Ford Tractor Operations of Ford Motor Company has designed this two-wheeled, seven-horsepower tractor specifically to bring the benefits of modern farming technology to people on small farms in developing countries at a price they can afford to pay. Ford has introduced the unit, called the Ford 1207, in Jamaica, at a suggested list price of $245 — a price comparable to the cost of a pair of oxen. The unit can plow approximately an acre or cultivate more than three acres in an eight-hour day. Ford plans eventually to market the small tractor worldwide.
