REVOLUTIONARY PATH

"Revolutionary Path," the last book written by the late Kwame Nkrumah, will be published in August by International Publishers. According to Louis Dicks, President of International Publishers, the book contains many documents, previously unpublished, representing the original thought of the leader of modern Ghana and outstanding leader in the struggle for African independence and unity. The book contains articles and speeches from the Africa Evening News, speeches and broadcasts, as well as important selections from books and pamphlets written in Conakry, Guinea between 1960 and 1971.

The book is expected from three sections which deal respectively: with the announcement of national liberation, the socialist reconstruction and unification in Africa, and the case made by the International Publishers party against the present situation in Africa. Nkrumah has been known as a leading theorist, and he has written his work in the movement against imperialism. The nature of his leadership, evident with a broad view, and unshakable optimism, is clearly reflected in words, written clearly before his death: "The African people, in solitude, with continents in every part of the world, have the necessary ability and the determination to break new ground for all imperials, neo-colonialism, racialist minority rule, and all forms of oppression from our continent. It is our duty and our sacred duty to break this ground, and we will be victorious. This is Victory for us."

The 352 page book will be available in cloth for $12.00 and paperback for $7.50.
